

Meet our ECMC Research Nurses:

Angela Litte, ICR ECMC

Being an ECMC Nurse...means keeping informed of good practice and sharing of ideas in a wider setting.

The most rewarding element...is getting to meet a wide variety of internal/external people, and knowing the data I capture make a difference to future treatments.

My advice to those considering becoming a nurse...is that you will never get bored as the job evolves continuously. The networking is truly global, and if you want a challenge then this is the job for you.

“You will never have done anything quite like the job before - the interaction you have with the patients makes it very rewarding”

Debra Jowle, Manchester ECMC

Being an ECMC Nurse...is both helpful & informative to be able to network within the group, glean ideas & comparing frustrations, also to collaborate on common themes.

The most challenging part of my role... Heavy workload of patients with complex needs on complicated trials whilst also now having to line manage junior staff.
